

HISTORY

The majestic square-towered building, now the thriving and popular Bromley Court Hotel, was originally a small villa built around 1800.

As the home of Charles Long MP, an “artistic” confidant to King William IV, over the years the house was visited by not just the king, but PM Duke of Wellington, PM William Pitt, William Wilberforce, George IV and Queen Adelaide.

Amelia Lane, Lady Farnborough, was a skilled horticulturist and laid out the beautiful gardens, as well as sculpting the two clay urns still in the garden today.

The house went on to be bought by the Cawston family and was extended to include a conservatory, dining areas and kitchens.

In 1931 it was converted into a hotel and acquired by Mr Leon Frenkel and is still owned by his family today.

In the 1950s the hotel was visited by another Prime Minister, MP for Bromley Harold Macmillan.

In the 60s and 70s the hotel was home to the Bromel Club which hosted the likes of Pink Floyd, Cream and Jimi Hendrix.

Today the hotel has 111 bedrooms and 9 events rooms catering for everything from meetings to weddings.
